Evolved Intelligence Announces Expansion Programme

Evolved Intelligence, the next generation IN company, has announced an expansion programme. A number of mobile operators in Europe, the Middle East and the Americas have started to use Evolved Intelligence's ENGINE platform. This has led to the need for an expansion of the company's delivery and development teams.

Says Evolved Intelligence's CEO, Dave Edwards: "Our ENGINE architecture is well adapted to the current market situation. It dramatically drives down the overall cost for the provision of applications such as steering of roaming, SMS fraud management and auxiliary pre-pay tariffing. Once operators have implemented one application, either as a remote managed service or on their own turnkey platform, they also typically start to add more applications as they come to realise the potential of the architecture. These two factors have led to the need for more development and implementation staff."

About Evolved Intelligence

Evolved Intelligence is based in Bristol, UK and was formed in 2007. The Evolved Intelligence team has a long experience in delivering IN services. Key members of the team worked for the Bristol based company, Aethos, widely regarded as one of the principal pioneers of pre-pay mobile communications. The Evolved Intelligence team is also a pioneer in the use of the JAIN platform and of Agile Development methodology.
